Wen

Clear with little cloud, crisp. 30°-37° F

I spent most of to-day, except for a walk to Harv. Sq., reading Hamlet for to-night.
My Deyler & I dined in Boston 6.30-7.40 &
then saw Forbes-Robertson in this wonderful play.
It was a marvelous performance - Hamlet's assumed gaiety in its scene with Players was so perfectly done and in contrast to his general humor. I saw him in Hamlet at Sanders Theatre in . . . To-night The Rump & his understudy were both & the part was read.

This morning I visited Dr. G. H. Waller who has sent me "The Flower-Finder", with his kind welcome for my new bridge and sent me lately. I did some sketching today. His name is very Latin, some preliminary work. Paper selected. Then after I went to Harvard, and then 11 of Cambridge and a Victorian. I lived no later than here, probably in Cambridge. Some doubtless had a liberal education. He was an architect & engineer. From the introduction to the chapters of his work, he was evidently not successful, but appeared again for his books. He mentions but one book, that he liked and in such detail that Prof. H. has had it reconstructed in drawing for the translation, on to appear. Not hard some 1861, "Age has married my face". Position in army then positioned. Not much originality, followed the Greeks largely. Not literary in style. Published treatise on architecture, most of his rules are the ones of today. Got the Latin of Rome to 1/2.

	Helen was on the Olympic and she certainly had a very narrow escape. She was only 10,000 from the Cretaceous at the time and the transcript gives a most vivid acc't. of the whole affair. The O. was seen to the rescue. The ship kept afloat 12 hrs. fortunately. She was No. 3 in the British Navy —
